So I decided to design my calculator around the buttons that it has with the four operations which when clicked give the result of the two numbers selected and a 1st and 2nd number selector to switch between the positions. The user presses enter in order to submit a change to the number in that position. It could be extended to add additional mathematical functions with more buttons and adding more backend functionality to handle the requests. If storage is needed an azure database could be used.